

DEATH PENALTY COLLEGE

June 14-20, 2009

Now, you can learn the Gerry Spence Method in a program designed by and for criminal defense lawyers, investigators and mitigation specialists who work on death penalty cases.

This unique program brings together the critical members of a client's team to find and explore the client's life story and to learn how to tell this story to a jury. The TLC Death Penalty program incorporates a teaching method pioneered at the Trial Lawyer's College and refined over the last 15 years.

At the Trial Lawyer's College we learn by doing. All participants will learn to understand the client's story from the points of view of the client, the witnesses, and the jurors.

If you attend this program, you can learn valuable skills in how to personally survive the emotional intensity of a death penalty case, to deal with your own issues while fulfilling your obligations to your client and build an effective defense team.

You can learn to:

- help the jury crawl into the hide of the client;
- know and understand the jury;
- discover and communicate the story in an open, honest and effective way;
- and empower the jury to find justice in a sentence less than death.

What participants have to say about this program...

"Before I attended the Death Penalty College, I felt alone and isolated in my practice. When I left, I knew that I was not alone. I now had a nationwide network of brothers and sisters upon whom I could call for help and advice. We met as strangers, but soon forged friendships that will last a lifetime."

Jack Gately, Virginia Beach, VA

"It is a very worthwhile program that teaches you to use your emotions to effectively improve your chances and bring your case to life."

*Jonathan Broun
Center for Death Penalty Litigation
Durham, North Carolina*

"The legal talent assembled at the Trial Lawyers College Death Penalty College was amazing. Both the faculty and the students were the best and the brightest. There is absolutely no doubt that many lives will be saved because lawyers who care came together in Wyoming and worked as a team to better their skills as death penalty defenders....This Death Penalty College is a must for lawyers with the duty of keeping the government from killing."

*David T. McKenzie - Asst. Public Defender
Oklahoma County, Oklahoma*

"The Trial Lawyers College Death Penalty College gave me the tools with which to better communicate with my client and the jury. These tools will help me become a better lawyer. There is no better College, for the money or time, that you can attend."

*Ernest "Buddy" Conner, Jr. - Attorney at Law
Greenville, North Carolina*

"I learned a great deal about style and tactics. The teaching staff was great. A super compilation of talent and personal-ity."

*Michael Foister - Law Office of J.N. Yoseph
Vancouver, Washington*

"By following through with the skills I learned, I will be able to significantly improve my skill as a death penalty lawyer and human being."

*Terence Lenamon - Lenamon & Walsh, P.A.
Miami, Florida*

"After 31 years of criminal defense practice, handling dozens of capital cases, and attending numerous death penalty programs, it is easy to believe that you've seen it all. Gerry Spence's Death Penalty College proved that there is still so much to be done. Throw away the 'bag of tricks,' this is real!"

*Robert W. Suhr
Columbus, Ohio*

"I got some priceless insights on how to present my case in the penalty phase."

*David Smith
Norman, Oklahoma*

"This is the best program you will ever go to!"

*Irene Pai
Orange County Pub. Def. Office
Santa Ana, California*

To aid lawyers who are dedicated to representing persons generally ill-served by the justice system, prominent trial lawyer Gerry Spence conceived and established the Trial Lawyers College in 1994 on a ranch in Western Wyoming. This college is dedicated to training effective and winning advocates for people.

Recognizing that lawyers who handle death penalty cases often face insurmountable odds and carry emotional burdens unlike those of any other lawyers working on behalf of the downtrodden and dispossessed, the Trial Lawyers College developed and designed a program exclusively for lawyers, investigators and mitigation specialists who handle death penalty cases. This program is unique and unlike any other currently in existence.
